

African Journal of Distance Education

Call for Papers

The African Journal of Distance Education is an official publication of the African Council for Distance Education (ACDE). Its first issue will roll out in August 2007 and the second issue in August 2008. This is a continental peer reviewed Journal dedicated to open and distance learning and its primary purpose is to document, disseminate and advance knowledge, teaching and research in this field. The journal publishes articles that critically explore research and theoretical issues as well as innovations that inform the theory and practice of open and distance learning.

This international peer reviewed Journal will be published annually every August in 2007 and 2008, and biannually in February and August from 2009. The Journal is published in both English and French languages.

We are now calling for papers to be considered for the August 2008 issue. The editors will consider research-based and theoretically grounded articles which examine the way in which public policy on distance education is formulated, developed and practiced. This premier journal of the African continent also aims at capturing, documenting and exchanging experiences in the theory and practice in any aspect of distance education and open learning. This call for papers aims at capturing innovative and cost effective practices in open and distance learning in relation to learning material development, delivery systems, management of learning, including learner support, and any other practices in ODL that would be of interest to policy makers and practitioners in this field. Contributors should consult the Notes for contributors (attached) which provide requirements for format and referencing to which the manuscripts submitted for consideration should comply.
